Summary Exercise: Mr. Popper's Penguins

Mr. Popper's Penguins

It was expensive to have huge cakes of ice brought up to their hotel rooms, to cool the penguins. The bills in the fine restaurants where the Poppers often took their meals were often dreadfully high. Fortunately, however, the penguins' food had stopped being an expense to them. On the road, they had to give up having tank cars of live fish shipped to them because it was so hard to get deliveries on time. So they went back to feeding the birds on canned shrimps.

This cost them absolutely nothing, for Mr. Popper had written a testimonial saying: "Popper's Performing Penguins thrive on Owens' Oceanic Shrimp."

This statement, with a picture of the twelve penguins, was printed in all the leading magazines, and the Owens' Oceanic Shrimp Company gave Mr. Popper an order that was good for free cans of shrimps at any grocery store anywhere in the country.

Several other companies, such as the Great Western Spinach Growers' Association and the Energetic Breakfast Oats Company, wanted him to recommend their product, too, and offered him large sums of cash. But the penguins simply refused to eat spinach or oats, and Mr. Popper was much too honest to say they would, even though he knew the money would come in handy.

"The Arrow and the Song"
by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

I shot an arrow into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For, so swiftly it flew, the sight
Could not follow it in its flight.

I breathed a song into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For who has sight so keen and strong,
That it can follow the flight of song?

Long, long afterward, in an oak
I found the arrow, still unbroke;
And the song, from beginning to end,
I found again in the heart of a friend.

Poem Memorization: "Ozymandias"

"Ozymandias"

by Percy Bysshe Shelley

I met a traveller from an antique land
Who said: "Two vast and trunkless legs of stone
Stand in the desert. Near them, on the sand,
Half sunk, a shattered visage lies, whose frown,
And wrinkled lip, and sneer of cold command,
Tell that its sculptor well those passions read
Which yet survive, stamped on these lifeless things,
The hand that mocked them, and the heart that fed:
And on the pedestal these words appear:
'My name is Ozymandias, king of kings:
Look on my works, ye Mighty, and despair!'
Nothing beside remains. Round the decay

Summary Exercise: Cowboys

Cowboys

A cowboy's hat was his trademark. Styles might vary—from sombreros to Stetsons—but the functions were the same. In blazing sun, the high crown kept the head cool while the broad brim shaded the eyes and neck. In rain and snow the hat was a mini-umbrella; it also protected against thorns and low-hanging branches. Made of high quality felt, it was meant to take years of wear. This was fortunate because a cowboy used his versatile hat as an alternative to a quirt (whip), to carry water (as shown in the famous Stetson label), to fan fires (or put them out), and occasionally even as a pillow.

Poem Memorization: "Learning to Read"

"Learning to Read"

by Frances Ellen Watkins Harper

Very soon the Yankee teachers
Came down and set up school;
But, oh! How the Rebs did hate it, —
It was agin' their rule.

Our masters always tried to hide
Book learning from our eyes;
Knowledge didn't agree with slavery—
'Twould make us all too wise.

But some of us would try to steal
A little from the book,
And put the words together,
And learn by hook or crook.

I remember Uncle Caldwell,
Who took pot liquor fat
And greased the pages of his book,
And hid it in his hat.

And had his master ever seen
The leaves upon his head,

He'd had thought them greasy papers,
But nothing to be read.

And there was Mr. Turner's Ben,
Who heard the children spell,
And picked the words right up by heart,
And learned to read 'em well.

Well, the Northern folks kept sending
The Yankee teachers down;
And they stood right up and helped us,
Though the Rebs did sneer and frown.

And I longed to read my Bible,
For precious words it said;
But when I begun to learn it,
Folks just shook their heads,

And said there is no use trying,
Oh! Chloe, you're too late;
But as I was rising sixty,
I had no time to wait.

So I got a pair of glasses,
And straight to work I went,
And never stopped till I could read
The hymns and Testament.

Then I got a little cabin
A place to call my own —
And I felt as independent
As the queen upon her throne.

LESSON 50

Summary Exercise: How Do We Measure Weight?

How Do We Measure Weight?

Children can compare their weights by sitting on a seesaw. Suppose two friends sit on either end of the seesaw at the same distance from the middle, or pivot point. When they lift up their legs, if one end of the seesaw goes down farther than the other, then the child on that end weighs the most.

Lots of weighing machines work like seesaws. These machines are called scales or balances. They have two pans on either side. They also have a set of weights of different sizes. The weights can be lifted on and off the pans. To weigh an object, you put it on one pan. Then you put weights on the other pan. When the scales balance, there is the same weight on each side. If you count the weights, you know how much the object weighs.

You can also put the weights on first. To measure 10 ounces of candies, for example, a shopkeeper puts 10 ounces of weights on one pan. Then she or he pours candies into the other pan until the scales balance.

Poem Memorization: "The Lake Isle of Innisfree"

"The Lake Isle of Innisfree"by William Butler Yeats

I will arise and go now, and go to Innisfree,
And a small cabin build there, of clay and wattles made:
Nine bean rows will I have there, a hive for the honey
bee,
And live alone in the bee-loud glade.

And I shall have some peace there, for peace comes dropping slow,
Dropping from the veils of the morning to where the cricket sings;
There midnight's all a glimmer, and noon a purple glow,
And evening full of the linnet's wings.

I will arise and go now, for always night and day
I hear the lake water lapping with the low sounds by the shore;
While I stand on the roadway, or on the pavements gray,
I hear it in the deep heart's core.

Summary Exercise: A Little Princess

A Little Princess

Sara stood silent for a second.

"I had no dinner," she said next, and her voice was quite low. She made it low because she was afraid it would tremble.

"There's some bread in the pantry," said the cook. "That's all you'll get at this time of day."

Sara went and found the bread. It was old and hard and dry. The cook was in too vicious a humor to give her anything to eat with it. It was always safe and easy to vent her spite on Sara. Really, it was hard for the child to climb the three long flights of stairs leading to her attic. She often found them long and steep when she was tired; but tonight it seemed as if she would never reach the top. Several times she was obliged to stop to rest. When she reached the top landing she was glad to see the glimmer of a light coming from under her door.

Poem Memorization: "The Height of the Ridiculous"

"The Height of the Ridiculous"

by Oliver Wendell Holmes

I wrote some lines once in a time
In wondrous merry mood,
And thought, as usual, men would say
They were exceeding good.

They were so queer, so very queer,
I laughed as I would die;
Albeit in a sober way,
A sober man am I.

I called my servant, and he came;
How kind it was of him
To mind a slender man like me,
He of the mighty limb!

"These to the printer," I exclaimed.
And in my humorous way,
I added (as a trifling jest),
"There'll be the devil to pay."

He took the paper, and I watched,
And saw him peep within;
At the first line he read, his face
Was all upon the grin.

He read the next; the grin grew broad,
And shot from ear to ear;
He read the third; a chuckling noise
I now began to hear.

The fourth; he broke into a roar;
The fifth; his waistband split;
The sixth; he burst five buttons off,
And tumbled in a fit.

Ten days and nights, with sleepless eye,
I watched that wretched man,
And since, I never dare to write
As funny as I can.

Summary Exercise: Abraham Lincoln

Abraham Lincoln

Mostly, he educated himself by borrowing books and newspapers. There are many stories about Lincoln's efforts to find enough books to satisfy him in that backwoods country. Those he liked he read again and again, losing himself in the adventures of Robinson Crusoe or the magical tales of The Arabian Nights. He was thrilled by a biography of George Washington, with its stirring account of the Revolutionary War. And he came to love the rhyme and rhythm of poetry, reciting passages from Shakespeare or the Scottish poet Robert Burns at the drop of a hat. He would carry a book out to the field with him, so he could read at the end of each plow furrow, while the horse was getting its breath. When noon came, he would sit under a tree and read while he ate. "I never saw Abe after he was twelve that he didn't have a book in his hand or in his pocket," Dennis Hanks remembered.

The Constitution is a famous warship that never lost a battle. It was launched at Boston on October 21, 1797.

The Constitution weathered forty-two battles. During a particularly fierce battle with an English warship near Cape Race, a sailor said, "There were English gun shots bouncing off the sides of the Constitution! I couldn't believe my eyes! It was as if her sides were made of iron." The ship earned the nickname "Old Ironsides." Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote a poem for the ship, protesting the order that the ship be destroyed in 1830. Here are a few verses:

Her deck, once red with heroes' blood,
Where knelt the vanquished foe,
Where winds were hurrying o'er the flood,
And waves were white below,
No more shall feel the victor's tread,
Or know the conquered knee;
The harpies of the shore shall pluck
The eagle of the sea!
